Presidential campaigns that argue they are the most electable should demonstrate that by some data that shows they can win against Trump in the swing states necessary to win the electoral college. Otherwise it's just a claim with no back up.

Approval rating is different than favorability/unfavorability ratings. When I'm saying "dislike" here I'm talking about the latter (and so perhaps shouldn't have called this "dual disapprovers" but "dual dislikers"—but that doesn't sound very good!

Neera Tanden @neeratanden · 28 Dec 2019
Dual dislikes is more accurate though. But thanks for the clarification. Got it now.

People say that 2016 was largely decided by voters who disliked both Clinton and Trump and voted overwhelmingly for Trump.

In 2020, the reverse might happen.

In the last month of Economist/YouGov polls, voters who dislike both Biden & Trump pick Biden by a 60 point margin.

Guess you say that when you don't want to find out the truth. As long as republicans keep getting their tax cuts and judges, right.

I know I'm far from the only one who had a beyond crappy 2019. So much so that the last few days have felt like a wretched crawl to a finish line that may make zero difference. #2020 may be just as bad or worse. But tonight I'll try to hope. Then again tomorrow. Then the next day

Any analysis of the situation should start from the extreme weakness of the Iranian regime : its economy is collapsing, its population revolting and Iraqis and Lebanese attacking its local allies. US military superiority is overwhelming. Weak and rational.

This is a fascinating window into press interests. Because another way to look at this is that it will elevate the issue of foreign policy. And actual Democratic primary voters have already formed views on that - on foreign policy they see Biden as top candidate by wide margin.

This is a neat trick- grossly edit a video and then say that we can grossly edit a video is a sign of weakness of the candidate.

Actually it's a sign of weakness of the candidate's opponents that they have to resort to fake videos.

A healthy primary process dismisses the liars.

When you talk to Social Democrats in Europe, they often make the case that the coalitional politics of a large party like the US Dem Party is its strength, not weakness. It's one of reasons for 2018 where Dems defeated authoritarian populism at a time only a few Social Dems have

This. When AOC, Trevor Noah and others talk about multiple party systems, I always feel the need to point out that U.S. 2 party system is just coalition governing built in. We don't have to form a govt after elections b/c we already have. Its a plus not a minus.

I've thought a lot about Clinton's fainting spell vs the Sanders heart attack. Could Clinton's campaign have done a "Hillary's back!" turnaround? Or was the sheer amount of conspiracy thinking and "sick Hillary" stuff too much?

2020 is finally here -and I'm going to try to do something new: turn my twitter feed into a channel for activism to defeat Trump. We need to turn our rage tweets into political action. In 2018 we won because people started engaging early, over the entire year.

We can defeat Trump - but it will take a mass mobilization. In 2018, Dems won because they were able to get presidential level volunteering in their congressional races. We need to that again, times 100. You can start now by connecting with your local Dem party.

If you're Trump, would you rather have a Resistance focused on:
1) his worst policies.
or
2) a conspiracy theory that he conspired w/ Russia & the belief that Mueller will prove it. This leads to bigger protests over Jeff Sessions' job security than say, saving the Iran deal.

Neera Tanden @neeratanden · Ene
Does straw men usually work with your followers? Because the Resistance has both opposed Trump on policy -defeating repeal of the ACA, fighting the tax cut - and pointed out Trump's affinity for authoritarians like Putin. Sad that your run interference for such authoritarians.

Now I think Biden should say he's happy to testify if Trump does.

This strategic genius has checkmated himself.

I argued with @JRubinBlogger and others that Pelosi shouldn't hold up the impeachment articles for very long, if at all. I didn't think it would matter. This makes clear that I was wrong and Pelosi and everyone else was right.

Glad for your honesty. I wish others who have pretty harshly attacked Pelosi this year over not doing their preferred strategy would similarly admit they may have not been a 1000% right.

Can't argue with where we are now. I mean, I didn't attack her or go blazing guns after her, I just thought it was risky. I also thought Jen was over-stating how much Trump wanted acquittal. I was wrong on both counts.

Friends let me explain something basic. Attacks that are false do not resonate with the majority as much as ones that are true. The GOP called Obama a socialist. But a majority never believed it Because It Was Laughable. That won't be the case with a self described socialist.

This is like reliving every lie from the Iraq War.

Just FYI: we were not treated as liberators.

It's all about the turnout and energizing the base to get out and vote. No one should count on mythical gop moderates who would vote for Dems. It's tribal politics in the age of Trump, they will either vote for Trump or not vote at [redacted]. Focus should be on turnout.

I am beginning to believe that voting should be REQUIRED BY LAW for all American citizens. And the entire voting process should be overhauled to make sure everyone can and does vote (easy registration, more polling locations, election day a national holiday, etc.)

I appreciate you recognize I never said what you stated I did.

Supporters of a candidate can't attack other candidates or people and call it divisive when others respond. That's its own version of gaslighting. But here's to a better 2020 than 2019.

Yes. And the US has the capability to flatten the entire IRGC infrastructure. Don't overreact. Iran will calibrate carefully. They won't want to trigger a tougher response - they lose that game. And it doesn't play well for them at home, particularly given current unrest.

Actually if you look at the response in Iran to sanctions, you see that it is sophisticated. Much of the blame piled on the regime, not those sanctioning. This is rare historically, but in Iran it happens. Don't underestimate people's intellect.

And also don't overestimate how "hated" the US is in Iran. Actually there's quite a high degree of love for US and western culture in general.

Biden and Klobuchar were honest about being more centrist. Buttigieg's original rhetoric was vague but more left leaning. Then he broke to the right. Buttigieg argued for M4A and now opposes it. His advertisements attack M4A and free public college explicitly.

I was warm to Butteigeig until he flip-flopped to a centrist position and went on full attack, mostly toward my preferred candidate Elizabeth Warren. His history with race politics is also squicky, but the lack of integrity is what fully turned me off.

Pete Buttigieg is Mitt Romney, but gay @migbike · Jan 1

I mean, 'young lefties' attack Biden too. Klobuchar is largely irrelevant.

But at least Klobuchar and Biden are honest about who they are. Pete's shift in messaging make it seem like he doesn't actually stand for anything- everything's a calculation.

Neera,

I am human scum--a #NeverTrumpers former Republican

I am a Veteran. I remain a "Conservative" in fiscal matters & the size of government-a "Liberal" in social/cultural issues

I will support the Dem running against Trump and actively help defeat DT

Sources tell me the U.S. government was given intelligence that Iranian militias were planning to kidnap Americans in Iraq. That might help explain why State Dept ordered all U.S. citizens to leave immediate.

This is a fascinating window into press interests. Because another way to look at this is that it will elevate the issue of foreign policy. And actual Democratic primary voters have already formed views on that - on foreign policy they see Biden as top candidate by wide margin.

I'd like to see focus group of likely voters invited to watch some of Biden's recent public appearances. His support ■ no doubt based on the idea people have of him. Watching just a few minutes of his present incarnation as an aggressive, dottering leech will be a reality check.

We are deploying thousands of troops to the Middle East. It would be nice if the suckers who believed Trump was going to bring the troops home, that he was some kind of peacenik, acknowledged their error. There are a lot of male pundits online and off that did so.

Notice anything missing in the CBS poll, when Iowans are asked what they want to hear candidates talk about?

Hint: What have we been talking about all weekend?

33. In the final month before the Iowa caucuses which of these is the issue you want to hear the candidates talk most about? PICK ONE

Health care	39%
Climate change	20%
Jobs and the economy	18%
Gun policy	8%
Immigration	5%
Judges and the Courts	4%
Race and gender	3%
Abortion	1%

Actually if you look at the response in Iran to sanctions, you see that it is sophisticated. Much of the blame piled on the regime, not those sanctioning. This is rare historically, but in Iran it happens. Don't underestimate people's intellect.

If you're Trump, would you rather have a Resistance focused on:
1) his worst policies.
2) a conspiracy theory that he conspired w/ Russia & the belief that Mueller will prove it. This leads to bigger protests over Jeff Sessions' job security than say, saving the Iran deal.

Killing an IRGC leader of this stature doesn't equate to targeting al Qaeda leaders. IRGC and Iran have interests, deliberate strategies for retaliating plus we targeted in Iraq, where we've got a vulnerable foot print. May need rapid force escalation in the region War. Donald started a war. Though this man needed to die, this is timed for little reason other than a distraction. It's way out of proportion to the embassy attack.

There are numerous websites that aggregate state polls where you can see who is leading in states against Trump. You may be surprised by the results. But that would also mean venturing outside of an echo chamber.

We have a giant deficit. They have a lot of oil. Most Americans would choose not ■ engage in the world because of that deficit. If we want to continue to engage in the world, gestures like having oil rich countries partially pay us back doesn't seem crazy to me.

Do we prefer cuts to Head Start? Or WIC? Or Medicaid? Because we live ■ deficit politics, and that's what is happening and will be happening even more.

We have a giant deficit. They have a lot of oil. Most Americans would choose not to engage in the world because of that deficit. If we want to continue to engage in the world, gestures like having oil rich countries partially pay us back doesn't seem crazy to me.

Do we prefer cuts to Head Start? Or WIC? Or Medicaid? Because we live in deficit politics, and that's what is happening and will be happening even more.

Northam is a conservative moderate. He offers Rs enough for them to cede an occasional liberal tilt win. Medicaid expansion is just middle-of-the-road common sense. Shame it is considered a progressive win.

I'm a volunteer with the campaign. I've texted and called for Bernie (even just yesterday) and I always get a script. Never has the campaign given me a script that contained what was released. Also, even if it did come from the campaign, who gives a fuck. They're mild critiques

Trump won because he threaded a very tiny needle in WI/PA/MI and ran against Hillary Clinton.

It's a mistake to claim the economy is clobbering the middle class, because it just doesn't match what the country is telling pollsters.

I don't think it's fair that we create our own domestic problems and then ask other nations to pay for it.

You see the adverse incentive problem here right? If we think we can make money off an incursion, we'll do it? that's a serious policy/messaging/moral problem for our foreign policy I think

We have a giant deficit. They have a lot of oil. Most Americans would choose not to engage in the world because of that deficit. If we want to continue to engage in the world, gestures like having oil rich countries partially pay us back doesn't seem crazy to me.

Do we prefer cuts to Head Start? Or WIC? Or Medicaid? Because we live in deficit politics, and that's what is happening and will be happening even more.

Huh?

> Glenn Greenwald @ggreenwald

Of course but the question is how - deferring to D party establishment attempts to clear the field for who is "next in line" hasn't worked well (Gore, Hillary, ... Biden?). Better to go with the candidate who shows electoral juice by actually winning contested primary elections.

If there's any way that it would make sense for the party to put its thumb on the scale, it probably is by taking control of the primary calendar to give priority to states statistically more likely to pick a candidate with national appeal.

What I've really enjoyed about the last couple of days of Dem primary twitter is the reliving of the nightmare of ugliness and divisiveness of the 2016 primary. You know, where the woman is an opportunistic establishment shill, the intensely personal attacks on her character.

The "safest bet" is also not "safe" if it makes it harder to achieve medium and long term goals or is not realistic about what those are. So how about continuing to aspire to all the attributes we seek in a candidate because that is not only ideal but in the longer run, wiser?

But high under-employment. Lots of people are working multiple jobs and barely getting by.

Why do you always make the Republicans' case for them? Couldn't you use your massive influence to argue our case against them, rather than theirs against us?

Because universal programs are harder to dismantle, where as means tested programs are easy to gut. Also why shouldn't a billionaire be able to send their kid to college for free if he's sending at least a few thousand kids to school for free with his taxes.

One of the many damaging consequences of Trump is that there is now a prevailing view that getting rid of him is so important that even if he is replaced by someone merely decent, merely competent, merely honest, that will somehow be enough. We will discover quickly it is not.

With respect, yes, but that's not the only job. It is only the first job. An equally important job ■ to lead the country after winning. From a partisan perspective it is to do so in a way that enables re-election and subsequent victories. But it also is to advance party goals.

David Rothkopf @djrothkopf · Jan 17

Not doing the above, helps the other party in the long term, hurts our party and hurts the country. Further, there is nothing to say that we must settle in order to win. The "safest bet" candidate may only, as is currently the case, a marginally safer choice. Many Dems can win.

I don't think it's fair that we create our own domestic problems and then ask other nations to pay for it.

You see the adverse incentive problem here right? If we think we can make money off an incursion, we'll do it? that's a serious policy/messaging/moral problem for our foreign policy I think

We have a giant deficit. They have a lot of oil. Most Americans would choose not to engage in the world because of that deficit. If we want to continue to engage in the world, gestures like having oil rich countries partially pay us back doesn't seem crazy to me.

Do we prefer cuts to Head Start? Or WIC? Or Medicaid? Because we live in deficit politics, and that's what is happening and will be happening even more.

What? When did Schumer tear up the Iran deal, threaten to destroy Iran's cultural sites, pardon war criminals, or increase the troops in the Middle East? Oh I forgot, you just have a knee jerk focus on blaming Dems.

Here is my concern with Biden:

Since he entered the race he's been propped up by the media as the most "electable"—which in turn influences voters & polling.

But when I watch Biden at the debates & on the trail he does not look or sound like the most electable candidate at all.

following statement after Vice President Joe Biden today lashed out at the Sanders campaign for criticizing Biden's consistent efforts to slash Social Security:

"Joe Biden should be honest with voters and stop trying to doctor his own public record of consistently and repeatedly trying to cut Social Security. The facts are very clear: Biden not only pushed to cut Social Security -- he is on tape proudly bragging about it on multiple occasions. The vice president must stop dodging questions about his record, and start explaining why he has so aggressively pushed to slash one of the most significant and successful social programs in American history, which millions of Americans rely on for survival."

I always imagined Rod Rosenstein to be a quiet hero at DOJ, working behind the scenes to protect the Mueller probe. Working to preserve our system of justice. Working to ensure the highest legal, ethical and professional standards were honored, in spite of Trump. I was so wrong.

Meh, he wrote the letter firing Comey—on the grounds that Comey shouldn't have scolded Clinton while declining to prosecute. He's not heroic, but he's certainly ironic.

Here is my concern with Biden:

Since he entered the race he's been propped up by the media as the most "electable"—which in turn influences voters & polling.

But when I watch Biden at the debates & on the trail he does not look or sound like the most electable candidate at all.

People may have different views of electability than you. The media wouldn't describe him as electable If he still didn't do well against Trump. But hey, sure support other candidates. But my plea to you is make the case for your candidate without denigrating others.

Not only does he say it, the media does too. I can't count how many times this week someone has said "while he's waiting for impeachment." He's waiting for conviction, but facts don't matter any more.

This is the kind of organizing we did in 2017 that brought great results in 2018. I know with the Dem primaries and impeachment, it is easy to lose focus. But don't. Don't agonize, organize

Late to this, but it's kind of amazing that the President of the United States has not challenged any of the facts of the case against him. Which is another way of saying he thinks he has the right to do this again, with impunity.

I made a chunk of this argument in 2018 about 2010 and what it has to teach us about the ability to use the presidency in 2021-22 to prevent another 2010 from occurring in 2022.

Does anyone remember what happened to the Democratic Party in 2010 under Biden's (apparently!) joint leadership?

Perhaps a bit more humility about downballot results would be in order, Joe....

The actual elections Obama and Biden were on the ballot, Dems did pretty well. They picked up seats - a lot of them - in both. If you're using any of this as a standard.

I believe that an Obama admin that had used executive powers from the jump (hard under Rahm, Cass Sunstein, Lanny Breuer, Bill Daley, etc...) to prosecute bankers, Bush alums, and push aggressive executive actions could have won the post-Bush Admin election.

My sweet, gentle dad died last night. We lost a man of deep integrity, faith, humor, honor. I never heard my dad raise his voice or utter a curse word. But millions of times I heard him laugh at Mom's jokes. We are so grateful for his 88 years; he is now at peace. I love you Dad.

it's bad when Bernie said it in '96. too, no doubt. There's no perfect candidate. Glad we all agree that Biden was calling for cuts in 2018.

Serious question: If McConnell offered tax hikes on the rich in exchange for modest Social Security cuts, do you think Biden takes it?

No. I don't think any of the Dem candidates are going to cut Social Security. This whole debate is a farce. But I do think you're onto something. Biggest question may be who can make McConnell minority leader.

Bernie's strategy of expanding the democratic voter base has the greatest chance of trickling to downticket candidates. So he's got the best shot. Biden will bring the same old folks to the polls.

Simpson-Bowles tried to cut social security 8 years ago. Biden supported it. Sanders opposed it.

I think a really easy and fair question to ask Biden (and other candidates): do they support COLA adjustments to Social Security as part of a deal with the GOP? Obama (and Biden) were open to such a deal while progressives were against it.

Bernie is not my candidate but it seems obvious to me that he was right to take the Joe Rogan endorsement. One premise of his campaign ■ that he can win some number of alienated men with reactionary social views to the left, and this is proof of concept.

There's a third option. Do it without championing bigots.

We've confirmed racist impulses. Thank you.

Seriously, I'm not convinced it's good politics (or good behaviour) to tell people who've made racist jokes or even like racist jokes that they're not welcome in our coalition. Hate the sin not the sinner.

This feels like that to me.

Ok let anyone vote for you. But when you champion their endorsement for your campaign, you're championing their views. No one makes a candidate celebrate an endorsement.

I don't know whether he's got any racist tendencies or not, but I do know that he's not David Duke, former grand wizard of the Ku Klux Klan. ffs.

Every human being holds non-cognizant prejudices. Winning people over to inclusive politics despite those prejudices is the point.

Sanders literally attacked Hillary for saying good things about Kissinger in a book. At least her campaign didn't put out a video celebrating a Kissinger endorsement. Your situational purity is quite stunning.

Let's hope jurors in Trump's eventual criminal trial will better fulfill their civic duty. I wonder, though, whether Trump will arrive in court using a walker, like Harvey Weinstein, claiming to be blind, like Cosby, or exaggerating his dementia, like Corrado "Junior" Soprano.

Important: The jury is rigged. Measuring success by whether GOP senators like an argument is a losers game. The goal is to convince the public. Only they can move the GOP. Any report tsk tsking Dems for too tough an argument means it's successful. Don't fall for their con.

Even the religious right is just more coldly rational and calculating than the woke left. They don't support Trump because they like his philandering and crudity, but because he's with them when it counts - on legislation, appointments and executive action. That's how you win.

Another (quality) national Fox News poll showing Trump's disadvantage in the 2020 election. As you know, I think the narrower margins (no margin for Klobuchar) is purely a product of low name ID & incumbency effect, which although diminished still exerts power-esp in polling.

A part of the Sanders story that gets lost is that he won when Vermont was a swing state and he cast some strategic votes, while still generally staying on the left of the conference. Even in 2000, Gore only got 51% in Vermont (with a lot of Nader spoiler votes).

Some Democrats still think compromising to win and to further their goals incrementally instead of taking a long draw on the Crack Pipe of Purity is somehow low and ignoble. It's one of the things Republicans counted on for years.

Much love to Elizabeth Warren and Bernie Sanders. The only two true reform candidates that can turn this country - and help turn this world - around.

Everyone else is just going to contribute directly to the rise of the American Oligarchic Experiment.

I hope you reconsider & show genuine solidarity w the millions of amazing Bernie supporters whose experiences you ignore.

Happy to respect supporters of Sanders and all candidates. Just don't appreciate the ones who become vicious online. This isn't a new concern. And I wish you'd show more concern about people who've been attacked

Great respect for supporters. But demanding silence for people who are facing rape or death threats is not acceptable. And it's not like we forget the snake emoji's bombarding a woman candidate just a few weeks ago.

Neera Tanden once outed in a meeting, the name of an employee who had a harassment claim.

CAP under Neera struggled to address other allegations of harassment: bit.ly/38HCwHG

Neera even assaulted (pushed) an employee who, now yrs later, is Bernie's camp manager.

As I've been saying for months, anyone who thinks Trump is easy to beat or anyone beats him are kidding themselves. People who tell you anyone can beat him are simply wrong.

Idk why some people have trouble understanding that. 90% of the states are going to vote the same way they have been.

Stop gaslighting. Denying people's experiences isn't progressive. No one is saying Sen Sanders is doing this but I've had death threats from supporters of Sen Sanders. And instead of saying that's bad or people should cool it, you engage in classic whataboutism. Disturbing.

My first and only caucus in 2008 when I lived in MN took about 2 and a half hours because of the walking subcaucus phase.

And first we had to listen to speeches from people who were concerned about drinking water fluoridation.

Victoria Brownworth @VABVOX · Jan 28
That sounds like early Sanders. He had a big thing about fluoridation....I keep wondering when we will end the legal voter suppression of caucuses in which the most privileged and most shouty win.

Stop gaslighting. Denying people's experiences isn't progressive. No one is saying Sen Sanders is doing this but I've had death threats from supporters of Sen Sanders. And instead of saying that's bad or people should cool it, you engage in classic whataboutism. Disturbing.

The Feinstein article was a disaster because not only was the title misleading, and the article poorly structured to misconstrue Feinstein's actual opinion, it was behind a paywall. People couldn't even read her quotes and only saw the headline.

THIS. Exactly. Though I'm trashing Scott effing Brown on this one. If he didn't win the Senate had the votes to conference the House version of the ACA, which had a public option. As is, the House had to vote the previously passed version of the Senate bill.

What the "Wallace phenomenon" indicates is that this country is reaching a point at which there is no turning back. It's too late for Ed Muskie and Phil Hoff, and it's too late for cliches and slick advertising. The contradictions are too irreconcilable, the tensions too great. Something has got to give. There will, I believe, be fundamental change in America in the not too

The blame shifting came from the Dems who spent weeks appealing to Mitch McConnell to do the right thing when we all knew he wouldn't. They should have been hammering home the point the fix was in instead of begging Senate GOP to have ■ conscience.

No one was begging McConnell. People have been lighting up the phones and protesting the swing GOP. Now we've at least laid down the idea it's a rigged trial.

what else ■ he supposed to do? the point of this wasn't removal since that's never gonna happen, it was to inflict as much pain on swing GOPers for attack ads. and the four were needed for additional witnesses

They set the precedent down to now say that. By pushing for witnesses, now 70 percent of the country wants witnesses. And won't get them. Leading them to be more likely to think it's a sham. Which means Trump's "aquittal" will always be a joke. And give him no benefit.

It's a little odd to me that the female candidate gets harangued on paying for her health care plan and the male candidate can just "brush off" the precise same question about his health care plan. How is that explicable in any way that isn't a double standard for women?

INBOX: @AmyMcGrathKY endorses @JoeBiden for President ahead of the caucus.

"Joe is the Democrat who can bring our country together, restore our reputation abroad, and bring real change to a nation torn apart by partisanship. We need that now more than ever."

Marine Combat Veteran Amy McGrath of Kentucky Endorses Joe Biden for President

Today, Marine combat veteran Amy McGrath -- the Democratic candidate for Senate in Kentucky -- released the following statement endorsing Joe Biden for President of the United States:

"Democrats have a slate of serious and thoughtful presidential candidates this year whose ideas and policy goals span our 'big tent' party. While some Democrats believe the challenges we face as a nation demand revolutionary action, others -- like me -- believe the best path forward is to start by unifying our country and delivering results for American families.

"We need a nominee who can connect with working class Americans and who has achievable plans to move our country forward. We need a leader who can return our nation to stable foreign policy that respects our allies and alliances, and who ensures our international actions are grounded in thoughtful, measured decision-making.

"Honor and integrity are at the heart of everything Marines do. It's why I believe so strongly that Joe Biden is the president who can return honor and integrity to the Oval Office. Throughout his career in public service, Joe Biden has always stood with working people in Kentucky and across our great country. It's why he's respected and beloved by Democrats and Republicans alike. Joe is the Democrat who can bring our country together, restore our reputation abroad, and bring real change to a nation torn apart by partisanship. We need that now more than ever.

As I've said, caucuses are a travesty when this happens for any candidate

Jennifer Epstein ✓ @jeneps
Wayne Gerdes, a 63-year-old factory worker from Burlington, considers himself a Republican but supports Biden. He voted HRC in '16 bc "I couldn't stand Trump." And/but he won't be able to caucus on Monday bc his shift starts at 6 p.m. "I'm not going to People in the hospital cannot vote. People kept at home with kids can't vote. Students/profs with night classes cannot vote. Police/911/Fire on call cannot vote. The disabled cannot vote. The elderly cannot keep up with the stamina etc.

Caucuses are terrible and unfair.

I think the issue is Warren, Buttigieg and Klobuchar have a right to ask Bloomberg questions. That's why Warren asked for this. That's not to say the rules made sense before.

I'd ask you to consider that there's a lot of mistrust on all sides and one person's explanation can sound like another person's rationalization. And when some candidates don't seem to get that benefit of doubt, it can lead to a sense of bias.Even if that's not intentional at all

My twitter feed is full of campaign staff and surrogates attacking the DNC for making it possible for Bloomberg to qualify for debates. Many of these same campaigns have been quietly pressuring the DNC to put Bloomberg on stage so he is held accountable.

No one was begging McConnell. People have been lighting up the phones and protesting the swing GOP. Now we've at least laid down the idea it's a rigged trial.

I'd go further: one candidate will need to expand substantially beyond their current coalition for Dems to avoid a Milwaukee dumpster 🔥

> Nate Silver @NateSilver538
> It's worth remembering that nobody has more than ~25% of the vote right now and so all of the Democratic candidates are going to have to expand substantially beyond their current coalitions to win the nomination

Sanders will be getting a good number of delegates so a dumpster fire in Milwaukee seems unavoidable.

His campaign surrogates promote a "blow it all up" type of rhetoric and working style. It's the brand. Promising chaos & disruption is part of the appeal. If one spends any time browsing Rose Twitter, there's definitely some common themes & communication characteristics.

Said it before, & I'll say it again.

The GOP is currently, by far the greatest threat to our democracy.

From issues like climate change, to the disgraceful & cowardly actions they have taken today.

They do. All the head consultants either get briefed in advance with an embargo, or get the numbers leaked. You can bet every campaign's top people know. This decision by Buttigieg wasn't made in a vacuum.

She ran twice, she has signed up for a lifetime of possibly getting booed, which becomes more likely when she continues to rehash 2016 and trash Sanders in the media days before the Iowa caucus. You're smarter than this. You know exactly what's happening here and why.

Neera Tanden @neeratanden · Jan 31
Give me a break. No Dem presidential candidate signs up for a lifetime of boos by an audience of voters for a Dem primary cheered on by a Dem Member who that pres candidate has publicly defended. You're smarter than this.And I think Iowans, half of whom voted for Hillary, are too

On Jan 22, Trump was at 41.8-53.5 in the 538 tracker. This is just a blip from the intensity of the impeachment trial and the finality of the choice of guilt/removal. Wait for the SOTU to die down and check back in at the end of Feb. It will revert to the regular 41-53/54 range.

That's one way to look at it. Another way is that Democrats are right now at peak division among themselves due to the primary. It gives Trump a temporary opening for approval rating improvement. Once Dems refocus their fire on him with a nominee, his numbers will drop again.

The history, thank Arnold.

California's blanket primary system was ruled unconstitutional in California Democratic Party v. Jones in 2000 because it forced political parties to associate with candidates they did not endorse. Then in 2004, Proposition 62, an initiative to bring the nonpartisan blanket primary to California, failed with only 40% of the vote. However, Proposition 14, a nearly identical piece of legislation, passed on the June 2010 ballot with 53.7% of the vote.[19]

The relevant analogy is the electoral college. Hillary may have won the popular vote but she is not president because she didn't win the EC. Similarly, to be the nominee you need to have a majority of delegates, not the majority of raw votes.

All of the candidates deserved to have their speeches aired in their entirety. They worked hard and voters want to hear them. Above only mentions EW bc network I was watching cut away from her after airing others. It was written in the moment. The sentiment applies to everyone.

As we wake up and still have no results from the caucus debacle, it's a good time to remember the the committee to set the Dem primary calendar was the Unity and Reform Committee. There were defenders of caucuses on the committee.Folks like me argued caucuses were anti-democratic

A huge irony here is that part of what led to this was the desire for more transparency (reporting out the first and second alignments and the delegate equivalents)

Since you think we need a whole new party, I take it you're not running on the Dem party line but other party lines for your NY race.

There's a lot of choices in NY. No one is making you run on the Dem line.

The voters determine the delegates. #basicfacts

I find it strange for NYT to only show SDE count on frontpage, with no hints of raw votes. Why not be direct about what results are showing?

Caucuses aren't built to accurately report vote totals. This is the big problem with the system. Party folks are counting cards - a machine isn't counting ballots. This seems like one of the reasons for the chaos.

Thank you @neeratanden — @hey_itsthatguy I was consistent saying caucuses can build parties, esp super volunteers and party leadership posts IF run correctly. As a party, we need to move beyond party-run caucuses and primaries. We need to focus our resources.

The message of every head-to-head poll is that the Democrats all perform similarly to each other.

Small differences might decide the election, so the margin is worth fighting over. But socialism isn't alienating the electorate. Moderation isn't demobilizing liberals.

If you assume that self-reported results have a bias analogous to when campaigns release internal polls -- which I don't know is the correct assumption but I can't think of a better one? -- this would imply a tossup between Sanders and Buttiegieg.

Bernie Sanders campaign releases internal reporting numbers they say "represent the results from nearly 40 percent of precincts in Iowa."

Also, campaigns are more likely to have precinct captains/volunteers at precincts where they're doing well, which would unavoidably introduce some bias even if they're reporting all the data they do have honestly.

SDEs are used for the delegate count and the primary is a delegate race.

It's not really a democratic sample of Iowa Dems. Only a 1/4 of registered Dems caucused.

Let's get real, primaries are better.

Turnout below 2016 is surprising. And worrying. Not going to shade that.

> Michael McDonald @ElectProject
> Using total vote/precincts reporting, which is a crude measure, I get Iowa Dem turnout of about 163k. Some uncertainty, of course. If holds will be a little behind 2016's 171k, making 2020 the 3rd highest

Why is too many choices making the number smaller v bigger? Candidates are organizing for a year. More candidates should mean bringing out more people.

I'm hoping turn out was down because everyone decided they'll vote for who ever the democratic nominee is.... they're committed already no matter who it is. God I hope I'm right.

This poll as has as most of Change Research polling is awful and poorly done. It makes no sense for the @postandcourier, a great institution, to tie themselves with such bad polling.

I don't really get the conspiracy theories about the DMR poll. The caucuses are in two days. If your candidate was doing well in the poll, they'd likely do well 2 days from now.

Iowa isn't a representative state & caucuses are bad.But perhaps the most interesting aspect of the caucus for the future of the nomination is the realignments.Some campaigns gained on realignments, others didn't. Tells you something about who can grow.Politics is about addition Both Andrew Johnson and Bill Clinton saw some of their fellow Democrats vote to impeach.

Neither saw any of their fellow partisans actually vote to remove.

1. what is the actual mortality rate (it seems like the death rate is low, but probably higher than reported).
2. How successful is quarantining? Based on incubation period & what we know about contagion, it is likely successful.

Who can't participate in a caucus?

-People working weekday nights

-Families with young children

-People out of town & retirees who leave state in winter

-Many people with disabilities

-And Iowa only state banning ex-felons from voting

All of this suppresses turnout

Voting whether or not to remove a sitting President has been a truly difficult decision, and after listening to the arguments presented by both sides, I have reached my conclusion reluctantly. My full statement:

MANCHIN STATEMENT ON IMPEACHMENT DECISION

Washington, D.C. U.S. Senator Joe Manchin (D-WV) released the following statement on his impeachment decision.

"The charges brought against President Trump are serious and carry grave consequences for our nation. In establishing our new republic, the Framers of the Constitution risked everything to rebel against imperial rule and instead form a democratic government of checks and balances in which no one branch would have unlimited power. The greatest fear the Framers had was foreign intervention into our fragile democracy and they warned us of the tremendous harm toxic partisanship could have on our democratic system. Sadly the partisan episode that unfolded in the United States Senate betrays the duties entrusted to this body by the Constitution

"The evidence presented by the House Managers, including video testimony of witnesses under oath in the House of Representatives, clearly supports the charges brought against the President in the articles of impeachment.

"I have always wanted a fair trial in the Senate, and I am disappointed the President has counsel, and a majority of my Republican colleagues decided not to support the inclusion of additional witnesses and documents during the trial, resulting in the first Senate impeachment trial of a President without witnesses. And while the President may assert executive privilege, that privilege has limits and is not absolute. Despite the false claim that a President can do no wrong, the President is not entitled to act with blatant disregard for an equal branch of government or use the superpower status of the United States to condition our support of democracy and our allies on any political favor. That is not who we are as a country

"Voting whether or not to remove a sitting President has been a truly difficult decision, and after listening to the arguments presented by both sides, I have reached my conclusion reluctantly. For the reasons above I must vote yes on the articles of impeachment. I take no pleasure in these votes, and am saddened that is the legacy we leave our children and grandchildren. I have always wanted this President, and every President to succeed, but I deeply love our country and must do what I think is best for the nation."

Pelosi's tearing up the speech move was Trumpian in the effect it is having.
It is scoring her points with her base, it has made her the story, and it is generating the type of outrage from conservatives that we see from liberals over Trump's antics.

Trump set the tone when he refused to shake Pelosi's hand. He then stood in the House chamber, at her invitation, & read a speech full of lies. She never yelled out "you lie", didn't invite any of the people he forced out of the DOJ or diplomatic corp. & waited for him to finish.

If you assume that self-reported results have a bias analogous to when campaigns release internal polls -- which I don't know is the correct assumption but I can't think of a better one? -- this would imply a tossup between Sanders and Buttiegieg.

Jennifer Jacobs @JenniferJJacobs
Bernie Sanders campaign releases internal reporting numbers they say "represent the results from nearly 40 percent of precincts in Iowa."

Also, campaigns are more likely to have precinct captains/volunteers at precincts where they're doing well, which would unavoidably introduce some bias even if they're reporting all the data they do have honestly.

tbh it might be that Bernie is the favorite for the first alignment and Buttiegieg for state delegate equivalents, as Sanders's data shows a reasonably wide spread in those numbers

You're in the minority. Do a nexis search of the 72 hours after that debate. The man was absolutely bludgoned - portrayed as a buffoon at best and a mysognist at worst.

Pretty hard to live through that incident, then go back and research it, and not use a broad brush.

The interest in making Democrats responsible for Republicans nominating and then voting for Trump is bizarre. Great respect for your writing but this is not the fault of people who opposed him because they weren't nice enough to the previous GOP nominee.

i'm new to american politics, but is this normal? despite taking more than 3 days to review less than 200 000 votes, there are still numerous mistakes in the official results.

in my country, we literally count millions of votes of votes in a few hours without these mistakes.

The Treasury Dept. illegally blocks Trump's tax returns but hands over info to the GOP Senate? The federal govt is supposed to serve the people and not engage in political activity. Yet Trump is now running the executive branch as a tax-payer funded arm of his campaign.

Sanders says his strategy for passing Medicare for All is to rally the people of Kentucky to pressure McConnell transcripts.cnn.com/TRANSCRIPTS/20 …

COOPER: Let me just ask, though, if there isn't the groundswell of people, the revolution that you have talked about, of people supporting all these changes, are there compromises you're willing to make with Republicans to get close to what you want?

SANDERS: Well, I mean, you will look at it issue by issue, I think, for example that, you go out to the Americans – you go to Mitch McConnell's state of Kentucky, which is a state where a lot of people are struggling, and you say to those people, OK, this is my proposal. We're going to lower the age of Medicare from 65 to 55, and we're expanding it to cover, as I mentioned, dental care and home health care and eyeglasses and hearing AIDS. What percentage of the people do you think in Kentucky would support that proposal? My guess is 75 percent, 80 percent of the people

And you ask them as president to rally those people and tell them anywhere to support us. I hope we can do that

Sanders says Medicare for All is a compromise because it has a four-year transition

SANDERS: Well, Medicare for all, the proposal that we have, then, is in a sense a compromise because we don't do it all at once. We do it over a four-year period. And the first year, what we do is we expand Medicare

Medicare is a strong program right now. It's the most popular health insurance program out there. But it's not as good as it should be. So what we do in the first year, then, is we expand it to cover dental care, which [I think] oral health was a health care issue, hearing aids, eyeglasses, and [other health care]. And in year one of a four-year transition period, we lower the eligibility age from 65 down to 55. Year two, 45 years down. 35 Year four, everybody else. So there's kind of a compromise. There are some people who say, hey, let's do it. You know, other countries have done it all instantaneously. We do a four-year period

Topher Spiro @TopherSpiro · 21h

Notice here that Sanders is implying a two-step strategy without saying so - lowering the Medicare age first. He and his camp raked Warren for this.

This is so important. With trump at the top of the ticket Rs will vote down ballot. A strong D candidate will help with down ballot. Actually taking the Senate is even more important than even getting rid of trump.

Warren answers passionately on addressing systemic racism.

Steyer takes it up a notch.

"I am the only person on this stage who will say openly, I am for reparations."

Good exchanges here but actually makes the whiteness on the debate stage all the more glaring.

I don't like anyone interrupting. However, there doesn't seem to be any moderators who can keep debates on track in the modern era. I'd love it if the rules were respected and the questions asked were answered. Maybe only one live mic and equal minutes would be more fair.

These aren't big policy points, but @amyklobuchar had two of the lines that will be repeated often:

"59 is the new 38."

And

"He blames the King of Denmark. Who does that?"

Parents worry too much about peer pressure —and too little about peer choice.

Data: grades go up when kids hang out with good students.

Peer influence is inevitable. Whether it's more helpful or harmful depends on the friends kids make.

Sanders likes to claim he lost that open-seat House race in '88 because of guns. But what he doesn't mention is that then-Rep. Peter Smith then voted to ban semiautomatic weapons – and it created an opening for Sanders in '90, notes @POLITICO_Steve.

The problem is that he goes into the biggest delegate day with no momentum. If he doesn't do very well on that day, he has a very low probability of netting enough delegates to take the lead. We saw this in 08 and 16 and it's harder with more than 2 in the race

One of the leading advocates for transparency, @ggreenwald now characterizes a request for transparency as an attack. A leading presidential candidate said he'd release his medical records, and then said he wouldn't. Instead of demanding transparency from Sanders, he attacks me💪

This is exactly why Dem primary voters are shunning candidates who attack other Dems. Because it is the hope and dream of Bannon and the GOP that the Dem candidates destroy each other. Dems want the primary to strengthen, not weaken, the nominee, whoever she or he is.

"The campaign must force Biden back into the Democratic primary," said Stephen K. Bannon, the former White House chief strategist. "They've allowed him to start a general election strategy unscathed by a potential bear pit created by the populist left. Sanders and Warren are your first lines of defense — and they must be weaponized to attack, especially on China."

Asked about the president's focus on Mr. Biden, a Trump campaign spokesman, Tim Murtaugh, said they "view the Democrat field as one big socialist organism with

One of the leading advocates for transparency, @ggreenwald now characterizes a request for transparency as an attack. A leading presidential candidate said he'd release his medical records, and then said he wouldn't. Instead of demanding transparency from Sanders, he attacks me 👉

Or perhaps one of the reasons Corbyn suffered a catastrophic defeat - the worst for Labour in 80 years - is because Corbynites were more focused on demanding liberals bend the knee than in fighting Tories.

You do realize that the DNC has punished states by not counting their delegates when they've flouted DNC rules in the past. For example, delegates from MI and FL didn't event count in 2008 because they violated the rules. So you have no idea what would've happened if this passed

I covered the Unity and Reform Commission and Iowa had zero interest in giving up its caucus, because then it would have to give up it's first-in-the-nation spot, or risk an actual shooting war with New Hampshire. (It's true Sanders folks argued to keep some other caucuses.)

Iowa decides the nature of their primary election and if they were to switch to a primary they would lose half of their delegates, because any primary (not caucus) going ahead of NH loses half of its delegates

That's a cheap shot that misses its mark. You're blaming Iowa & Iowans. This failure wasn't theirs. It was due to tinkering w/ their process & an app that didn't work. Having been to Iowa caucuses since 1984, they are a marvel & democracy in action.

Jim, I appreciate your views. I know your heartfelt support for the Iowa caucuses and how you were a tremendous champion for them on the URC. But as the NYT story makes clear, the problems with the caucus was not just the app, but far more fundamental.

This is an attempt to shift the blame for this mess away from the shady App. I'm not a caucus fan,but they never had problems like these in the past. Who ordered the app last min and why wasn't it tested?

Here is the repeal: "health reform vision" "market-based health care grant"

We've seen this before. It's Graham-Cassidy repeal on steroids.

Here are the additional cuts to Medicaid: "modernize Medicaid and CHIP" "Medicaid community engagement requirement"

This is national work requirements designed to throw people off coverage by burying them in paperwork.

Why is Trump scared of CA?
-$21.5 billion surplus
-Record low unemployment
-Creating 1 in 7 US jobs

Meanwhile Trump:
-DOUBLED the deficit
-Created over $3 TRILLION new debt

We're the progressive answer to his regressive policies.

It's driving him MAD.

Instead of saying, "Trump is not telling the truth" say, "Donald Trump is lying", "Donald Trump is a Liar", "Donald Trump is a pathological liar", etc. Speak with a more direct, confrontational, and factual terminology.

Until the wealthy pay the tax rates they paid in the 50s and 60s - which didn't hurt them at all - the govts they own will always be able to plead poverty rather than solve poverty. Vote only for those who promise to raise taxes on the wealthy. #NoLoopholes #BanBigMoneyInPolitics

Striking findings in new Quinnipiac poll:

By 55-40, voters say acquittal did not clear Trump of wrongdoing.

Among independents, that's 54-40 (!!)

Also, Trump's approval is 43%, and has not budged since mid-Dec. Mass hyping of Gallup poll was absurd.

BROKEN PROMISE: "I'm not going to cut Social Security like every other Republican, and I'm not going to cut Medicare or Medicaid."

REALITY: Trump's budget proposal slashes Medicaid and the Affordable Care Act by OVER $1 TRILLION—on top of cuts to Medicare and Social Security.

McCusker losing this nomination should be viewed in the same context as the Vindmans and Sondland losing their jobs.

The witnesses are getting axed.

The IG should investigate the motives of the thuggery of asking 7-9 years for a first time, 67 year old offender charged mostly with a thing that rarely gets prosecuted which came about from ■ congressional investigation into ■ DNC-funded farce that was known to be a hoax!

The question is why haven't more principled staff from DoD, State, and other agencies also resigned in protest too? If enough of them take a stand it would be impactful, and they can also testify to Congress.

Many are in a quandary. Resign in protest and make the statement, and it opens up room for a corrupt cabal to put yet another one of its corrupt lackeys in place to sully the system for years.
